

CASTLE GLENN

Welcome to Castle Glenn. This is a nice tourist location and since it was opened for tours of the Castle and grounds in the 1980's has expanded to a bed and breakfast and has added an evening show about the history of the castle and Mousey. This is a show using local talent, although Sir Montgomery Glenn has recently experimented with various bands and groups to add to the entertainment opportunities for the guests (to say nothing of the income of the Castle).

Tourists choose Castle Glenn for local fishing, hiking, searching for the fabled buried or lost treasure, and for ghost watching. (Whale watching pales in comparison to watching one or more ghosts as they go about their rounds. They care nothing about maintaining a schedule, or day or night. As one local plumber remarked "Ya see's 'em when ya see's 'um.")

Castle Glenn is a modest little castle in England that sits on 5400 acres which includes the Village of Mousey.

The castle was first constructed under the direction of Duke Royan Glenn in 1343. It has been in the Glenn family ever since

It was burned in a war between Kings in 1460 and rebuilt in 1465 for loyal service to Princess Penelope in her escape from the pretender to the title. Jock Glenn carried the Princess 14 miles on his back as he crawled through marsh and swamp, making sounds like a bull Crocodile. The Princess had a batch of thatch on her head to complete the disguise.

At the sacking of the Castle, it was rumored that there was a substantial treasure in the castle for payment of the construction contractor. However no money was found in the ruins. Unfortunately, the contractor was also found in the ruins. The site of the old Cathedral was searched, as there were supposed to be 3 oxcarts of gold and gold artifacts and silver flat ware. Legend plus old family tax records for the locality equal fabulous wealth!

Sir Montgomery Glenn recently is rumored, based on his research, to have found the treasure and had applied to the Crown for an Antiquities Permit to exceed $21 million dollars. To verify his claim, he produced a set of nine matched silver goblets worth at least $2,300 dollars each. They are authenticated as being made in mid 1300.

Now Sir Montgomery is dead! He was found dead in his room. He had a look of peace on his face. He had scrawled a note to himself on a pad on the desk which said "Feed the horses." The note was undated. He died on Tuesday, June 15, 1999, and was cremated on the same day. Today is the 16th.

The murderer must be caught before Sir Montgomery's spirit will be able to be put to rest. Each of you is a suspect in one way or another. Solve the murder before your friends choose you!

 All the values in this game are dollars rather than British Pounds for sake of simplicity.